

ABSTRACT

In a multi-layered real-time stereo matching system with a systolic array, one scan line in one digital image of the left and the right digital image is compared with multiple scan lines in the other digital image of the left and the right digital image in real-time so that each pixel in the one scan line may be matched with a pixel in the multiple scan lines in the other digital image.

10